

Dear relation,

In light of the severity of the corona virus (COVID-19) outbreak, we all share a common responsibility to minimize the chance of the virus spreading even more. Naturally, NewBees also takes that responsibility.

This means that, at least until April 6th, we will do a number of things differently, but NewBees will continue to deliver customization. Instead of the sustainable professional meetings that we organize every day between newcomers and local entrepreneurs and organizations, we will now use our network, knowledge and expertise to contribute in a different way:

1. Our matchers will actively contact all participants to ask them how they are doing and what this situation means to them. The traineeship is adapted to the current situation. They provide guidance to newbies on how to behave in this exceptional situation;
2. We will be in contact with our community as much as possible: especially at times like these it is important to keep talking and understanding each other. We offer our employees and our participants tips and tools to organize this;
3. For the time being, no new matches will be organized by NewBees. To prevent the spread of the virus, it is also up to us to avoid social and professional contact.

The health of our people and our participants is of course paramount. By taking these steps, NewBees hopes to contribute to their wellbeing.

We welcome all our partners, employers and other relations to reach out to their contact person or our website for information and advice.

Hoping you are all staying safe and healthy. And inside.
With kind regards,
